Free webinar: Reactivating the supply chain after COVID-19

With the significant disruption of business around the world as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, Ricardo experts will provide a free webinar to explore approaches to regaining or improving upon business as usual performance following lockdown

COVID-19 has created significant disruption for businesses, with particular impact on supply chain management. This has led many organisations to question the inherent risks in their operations and how, post-COVID-19, they can successfully relaunch their supply chain. For over a decade, Ricardo's experts have worked with organisations from around the world and across a range of industries to develop strategies and support successful relaunch of their supply chain following a variety of disruptions and challenges.

During the webinar to be hosted on 12 May 2020, 11.00-12.00 BST [12.00-13.00 CET] Ricardo strategic consulting and manufacturing experts will outline the common pit falls during supply chain relaunch. They will also provide insight into Ricardo's proven methodology for a rapid and robust relaunch of the industrial supply chain, helping businesses thrive while embrace the social distancing requirements of a 'new normal.'
